PERTINENT LETTER

A Seymour Boy of the Early Day Writes Congratulations.

The following letter received by me this morning is not only a line on a "Seymour boy" of the old time, but also contains many pertinent suggestions in view of the great victory which the people of Jackson county gained at the polls on last Monday.

H. W. Crabb will be remembered by many of our old citizens as Harry Crabb, son of Smith D. Crabb, who was one of Seymour's prominent merchants before and during the period of the Civil War, when he carried on a dry goods business in the house now occupied by Messrs. Weithoff & Kernan. Mr. Crabb was an influential citizen in many ways. One of his most prominent undertakings was the organization of our First National Bank, of which he was the first president.

His son Harry evidently takes after his father since he is one of the prominent and influential citizens of Decatur, Ill., today. Mr. Crabb is a cousin of Miss Nina Ewing, of our city.

DECATUR, ILL., APRIL 28, 1909.

MEEDY S. BLISH,
Seymour, Ind.

MY DEAR "MIN":

In our yesterday evening Decatur paper, which I am accustomed to bury myself in directly after supper, and usually with feet elevated considerably above the dignified posture, I read that Jackson County, Indiana, had succeeded in doing business with the saloon similar to the transaction in this county of one year ago, viz: abated the nuisance. If the report is true, HURRAH for SEYMOUR, if not hurrah anyhow for coming near enough to at least get such publicity so far away. I have spoken of the report concerning Jackson county to three friends, intending to explain to them where that locality was, and was surprised to have them, each, say, "why that's where Seymour is, the worst town on the map." Capt. Lytle, our Asst. Postmaster, remembered the town, having stopped there going and coming during the war.

Now Decatur with the assistance of the township vote turned the saloons out one year ago, and all sorts of predictions were freely made as to the business depression that would surely result. In fact, it almost seemed that the brewery, distillery and saloon were the producers of about all the wealth. Well, Decatur just somehow refused to believe any such nonsense, and capital continued to invest, business went right ahead, building operations continued right through the winter and the prices of corn and wheat reached the high water mark. Very close to 600 buildings were erected during the year; not a vacant store room that is at all desirable in the town. In March the primaries resulted in the nomination of a notorious saloon character on the republican ticket for Mayor, and the howl was sent up that Decatur had at least waked up from her dream and that the saloon would soon be flourishing and business would then be resumed. "But", one week ago yesterday, the old town stepped up to the polls, without the assistance of the outside vote, overcame an anomalous majority of 1500 and elected my old friend Charles Martin Borchers, Democrat, who stood for decency and law enforcement. Marion, Indiana, sent a delegation to Decatur this spring to learn just what I am telling you, that the saloon is down and out in Macon county, Illinois, if we can keep our local option law on the statutes.

This started out to be simply a letter of congratulation, if I don't reach the end soon it will be more of a treatise on the evils of drink, the beauties of temperance and the advantages of Decatur, on all of which much more can be said, and particularly the latter; but I do congratulate you and certainly hope the report is entirely correct.

With kindest regards to you and all of yours, I beg to remain, as ever,
Yours very truly,
H. W. CRABB.

LINTON MEN STUNG

Tell of Their Troubles With Mail Order House.

Two Linton men, George A. Scherb and Grant Bellamy, were seized with the foolish hallucination that they could buy from a Chicago mail order house cheaper than they could from their home town merchants. They sent the usual "pay in advance" money order and placed their order for a lot of "unsighted and unseen" goods. Upon receipt of the money the company notified them that the goods had advanced in price, and that before making shipment more money must be sent.

The two Linton men wrote to the company that they had sent them the catalogue price for the goods ordered, and for them to either send the stuff ordered, or return the money. So far the two men have been unable to get either the goods or the money, and they now tell their experience in the two Linton newspapers.

The moral of this is that it is always best to buy from home merchants. They sell just as cheap, quality of goods considered, they are responsible men, and you don't have to buy goods unsighted and unseen, then wait from two to three weeks for your order to arrive, and when it does get here pay the freight.

She will be heard at the Friday Matinee, May 7th. The Musical Festival will be held in the Armory building, Louisville, May 6, 7 and 8.

Union Praise Service.

There was a union praise meeting at the First Baptist church Wednesday evening, taking the place of the regular prayer meetings of several of the churches in the city. There was quite a large attendance including a half dozen ministers. Rev. James Omelvena presided and quite a number took part. The recent victory of the temperance forces in Jackson county prompted this union prayer and praise meeting and it was a very successful meeting.

Several will go from Seymour to attend the exercises.

About Dogs.

Not infrequently the garbage collectors find dead dogs on ash heaps or in the alleys that have been there for days. This week somebody threw one on top of the city dump where it soon became offensive. This was wrong and should not be done again. If your dog dies the thing to do is to ring up Sam Nicholson, the garbage collector, and he will come and get it and bury it without delay. This will be an easy thing to do and should be done in justice to yourself, your neighbors and the garbage collector.

Careless Writing.

A campaign of education has been inaugurated by the post office department to attempt in some measure to offset the load of business falling on the dead letter division. Last year more than 13,000,000 pieces of mail matter went to the dead letter office, a large portion of which could not be delivered because of carelessness in writing addresses. About 20,000 of the number were contributed from Indianapolis.

Good Advice.

With the affairs of the People's State Bank practically straightened up; with the telephone question settled, and the local option agitation at an end, there is no reason why the people cannot settle down to business. These have all been matters that have caused more or less disturbance, and it's now time to forget them.—Brownstown Banner.

UNCLE SAM IS QUITE WILLINGNew Rule In Turkey Welcomed
In Washington.

CIVILIZATION SCORES ONE

It is Felt In the State Department

That in Every Way Conditions in Turkey in Their Relation to Other Nations Are to Be Distinctly Bettered By the Change of Regime—The Missionary Question in Particular is Likely to Be Less Irritating.

Washington, April 28.—Prompt recognition will be given to the new government of Turkey by the administration when official news of the order of things in the Ottoman empire reaches Washington. Speculation is rife as to what will happen under the reorganized government, it being recognized that in the present inchoate condition of affairs, nobody can safely predict what the outcome will be. The universal opinion, however, is that if the Young Turks party is equal to the trust imposed, a new era with bright prospects is in store for Turkey.

It is recognized generally in diplomatic circles that although the Young Turks' following is by comparison numerically small, and that its administration will be beset constantly by the machinations of the reactionaries, yet by the selection for sultan of Mehmed Reschad Effendi, the party has gained prestige and will reap the benefits of the support of the Mohammedan religion. In bestowing the honor upon Reschad they have avoided the alienation of the family of the reigning house.

Beyond all other considerations, the opinion is expressed that with the new sultan on the throne, and with the Young Turks party in full power, there will be a rehabilitation of the relations with the countries of the world and opportunity offered for a more satisfactory treatment of the missionary question, which has been a troublesome one, and which on many occasions has led to diplomatic representations to the Turkish government from the state department. In many little things, which in the aggregate are considerable, the administration of the Young Turks government has been very satisfactory to the state department. Annoyances affecting travelers in Turkey, irritating questions touching the Armenians and those of naturalization have disappeared and in other ways a more liberal application of the local and general laws has prevailed.

According to prominent diplomatic view, Turkey is not in a position warranting the establishment of a full fledged republic and better results may be obtained by a continuation of the present form of government, with an intelligent, conscientious, honest man at the helm of state.

ROLLING GOOD FOR ROADS.

Auto Found Serviceable in Making Street Passable After Snows.

The man who brings together the best productions in different lines and obtains results which better his own production may not be an inventor in the true sense of the word, but he certainly possesses good common sense.

In Vermont and other New England states a road roller is used in the winter to pack down the snow and make the roads passable. By doing this after each snowstorm a really fine winter road results. The method used in upper New York is to draw two large iron kettles, such as are used for the making of soft soap, behind a team of horses or oxen. This is not very perfect, as it leaves a core in the road and simply pushes the snow to the side of the road instead of packing it down.

After a recent snowstorm in Reading, Pa., in which the roads were left in bad condition, H. L. Hardy, the designer at a factory, conceived the idea of rolling the roads. He attached an ordinary land roller to the front of a sextuplet and started from the factory to the home of Mr. Sternbergh. Naturally he did not try to break any speed records, but the trip, about six miles, was made in one hour.

One of the road commissioners of Berks county accompanied him and was much surprised to see what an improvement this roller process was over the kettle drag. Mr. Hardy says he will not patent or copyright this idea, so any one who desires to roll snow roads by automobile is free to try it.

A TANTALIZING CUP.

Interesting Experiment With Eggshell, Cork and Straw.

Tantalus, according to the legend, having offended the gods, was punished by being made very thirsty, having a cup of water placed continually just out of his reach. From this story we get our word tantalize. To make a cup of tantalus—that is, a cup that can be filled part way, but never to the brim—follow directions:

Get an empty eggshell and break off the large end of it, say half an inch down. Through the small end bore a hole just the size to admit a good, firm straw. Now hollow out one end of a cork so that the shell will fit in it, and through the cork bore a hole to admit the straw.

Run the straw up through the cork and into the shell for half an inch or so. Make all the joints tight with sealing wax and fasten the shell to the cork in the same way.

Cover the top of the straw in the shell with a thimble, which will rest on the bottom of the shell and almost, but not quite, touch the top of the straw.

Now, to make a little tripod for this apparatus stick the prongs of three forks in the cork and then place a tumbler under it. Pour some water into the shell. It will not run out through the straw at the bottom at first, but when it rises as high as the thimble it will begin to run, for it goes up under the thimble and enters the upper end of the straw, thus finding an outlet. By fastening a wire around the cork and bringing one end up to the edge of the cup a manikin may be held in the position of bending over to drink. Have the lips of the manikin just above the level of the water.

CAPTURING SNAKES.

How Serpent Hunters of the Tropics Secure Their Prey.

The capture of snakes is simple and comparatively free from danger, says the Chicago News. In the great swamps of India they are caught in the early morning, when they are stiff from cold. The natives use nets for the purpose or else press a stick against the back of the snake's back, thus holding it fast until they can put it away safely.

Another method is to surround a spot known to be full of snakes with nets during the dry season and set the underbrush on fire. The snakes rush for safety in all directions and fall in great numbers into the nets. This method is often used to catch the big garter snakes. Hagenbeck states that many specimens of such monsters received by him from Calcutta bear marks of burning.

The giant snakes of Borneo fall a prey to the native hunters after they have gorged themselves to such an extent on food that they can scarcely move at all. Nets are then thrown over them, and they are delivered to Hagenbeck's agents.

Some snake hunters of India rely almost entirely on their sense of smell for ferreting out their victims. These hunters set out in the cold of the morning, knowing, more or less, where the holes are in which the snakes live. By means of their keen sense of smell they can tell whether a snake is at home. They then dig it out and, as it is half frozen still, succeed easily in imprisoning it in their baskets.

The Pine Tree's Secret.

The pine tree lifted his proud head high. While the frolicking winds went trooping by—

The boisterous winds that high and low Had tramped that morning over the snow. They had climbed to the top of the bleak round hills, Had loitered to leer at the captive rills. "Oh, ho!" they cried to the pine tree old. "We can guess, we can guess what your great arms hold!

They are empty nests, for away on wing The nestlings have flown where the south winds sing." The pine tree sighed—he had grown so wise

From the old white owl with the blinking eyes— The pine tree sighed, but he whispered low To the sunbeams merry that danced below

A secret we, who are friends, may know. The winds went on with rollicking shout. They scattered the brown little leaves about, And they never knew, nor do to this day, What the faithful pine kept hidden away. But the sunbeams merry, he welcomed them all.

They climbed, with never a fear or fall, Higher and higher, where, lo, on his breast The brave old pine held a warm, round nest.

The sunbeams smiled as he gave them a peep. Three small flying squirrels fast asleep! Round and fuzzy and puffy and gray, While mamma squirrel had flown away On her funny flat wings from tree to tree To bring some nuts to her babies three.

The winds heard only the pine tree's sigh. But we know him better, you and I. —Youth's Companion.

TOWN BOOSTING PLAN

How Advertising Benefited "Lost-
burg" and Paid a Syndicate.

VENTURE OF THREE HUSTLERS

Bought Up Whole Town and Outlying Lands in Semiarid State—Developed
Water by Sinking Wells—Wonderful
Change in Less Than Two Years.

Does it pay to advertise a town?
Here is a true narrative that proves how greatly it pays. In this instance it has paid a syndicate of three men, and the citizens of the town have profited inevitably, but if these same citizens had done the advertising themselves, as they might have done, the big profits would have gone to them
instead of to the three outsiders.

In a western state there was an old town very much run down at the heels.
It had had a fairly good population in years gone by, but owing to lack of interest in the home place among the people who lived there this old town
gradually disintegrated, went to pieces, got liver complaint or something and finally faded almost out of existence.
Its population of 600 to 700 dwindled to less than 200. Grass grew in all the streets, so that the village cow had no need to go afield for pasture. It was fine for the village cow, but not so fine for the villager who did not own the cow and who had to earn money there in order to buy milk from his cow owning neighbor.

There was a railroad that ran through this town. "Ran through" is just what it meant. The trains ran through, on the through line, too, the main line, and now and then they hesi-tated at the station to let off or take on a passenger who flagged the engineer. Train crews got to making this deserted village the butt of their jokes. They took joy in commenting upon the run down appearance of the place. They called it "Lostburg," because it had disappeared from the state map and was but an infinitesimal
point on the railroad map.

The few remaining citizens used to go up to the "deep" and watch the limited train speed by like a flash of oiled lightning on a stormy day. They would go up and sit beside the water tank and chat with the head brakeman of the local freight. The local freight sometimes stopped in Lostburg to get a drink. Be it known that the lost village was in one of the semiarid states, where water is scarce at the surface. The railroad people had "developed" water. They sank a well down about eighty feet and found a fine supply—just the sort that locomotives like to drink. The rest of the village drank the subsurface water, ten or fifteen feet under, which they could get at small expense. They used to sit around the tank and talk of the possibilities of Lostburg—if it only had more wells like the one developed by the railroad.

"Finest farming and orchard land in seven states around here," was the common expression, "but nothing doing because we hain't got the water."
"Why don't you get the water, then?" Inquired a keen looking young fellow of about thirty-five who loped off the limited when it made a slight pause one day. He loped off down near the water tank because it was water that he was looking for in Lost-burg and its vicinity.

"Oh, we don't just seem to take no interest," said the languid citizen who had made the "nothing doing" remark.
"Huh!" commented the newcomer.
The young man spent a week at the local hotel, which had not entertained a guest in six weeks. He went out into the surrounding lands and made investigations. Then he went back to the state's metropolis.

A month or so later the keen looking young man returned with two other men, older and just as keen. In six weeks' time they had bought up the town—actually bought the whole works, reasonably too. They bought also the outlying lands for miles around, so that they had a town and a tract surrounding it about five miles square.

Then they brought engineers to the place and developed water, just like the tank brand, here, there and everywhere. The wells flowed with wonderful regularity and volume. There was water enough in sight to irrigate the entire tract and plenty more on the outskirts, or, as the keen eyed young promoter remarked, "the undershirts."

"What happened?"
Do you ask it?
Just this. The syndicate sold back to the original owners in many instances their houses and lots at a big profit to the syndicate. They sold also thousands of acres of farm and orchard land. They set out thousands of acres of apples and other fruits for which the soil and climate were best adapted. They planted the plains to alfalfa and sold other acres to alfalfa hungry farmers. The result is that this town in less than two years has upward of 1,200 happy, satisfied, prosperous people, while several hundred more are developing farms near by.

Now the limited stops there because there is such an inrush of home seekers, land buyers, speculators and pro-motors.

The syndicate did all this by advertising. They paid for space in city and country newspapers. They plastered the plains with posters and deluged
the deserts with doggers.

"Might 'a' done it ourselves if we'd had the git-up," now says the water tank pessimist, who knew all the time that the country was underlaid with water.

Any town can boost itself by advertising itself. ROBERTUS LOVE.

NEW SPRING HATS.

These new spring hats are frightful
things.

They look like washtubs when inverted.
To each a hanging garden clings.
With here and there a twig inserted.
If ever since this world began
More homely headgear was invented,
The poor inventor, whether man
Or woman, must have been demented.

You wonder when you see them in Show windows scattered through the city

How women wearing them may win
Men's love or be considered pretty.
You ask yourself as you behold
Them on the dummies forced to bear
them

How lovely women, young or old,
May ever be induced to wear them.

But be of good cheer yet and cling Unceasingly to hope, O brother!
The maiden will be sweet this spring
And charming still somehow or other.
She never yet has failed to stir
The old, disturbing, heavenly passion,
No matter what the milliner
Decreed to be the latest fashion.
—Chicago Record-Herald.

Our Language.

Farmer (to son)—Yew kin go out an'
cut that tree down, an' then ternerrer yew kin cut it up.

Sure of It.

The irate parent presented himself
before the culprits. "Young man," demanded he, with the utmost sternness,
"have I caught you kissing my daughter?"

If by this he expected to plunge the young visitor into confusion it must be confessed that the old gentleman was greatly mistaken, inasmuch as the young visitor evinced the greatest calmness.

"I hope, sir," he said, "there is no mistake about it. The lights are none too bright, and I would be much mortified to learn that, after all, I was kissing the housemaid."—New York Herald.

The Chain of Habit.

"Habit is mighty strong in its grip
on a man," says the magazine editor.
"Now, there's Jimmy Brace, the reformed second story worker, who has been doing some short stories for us."
"What about him?" asks the subscriber.

"The second story habit is so much alive in his breast that he wants to write a sequel to every story he does."
—Chicago Post.

They Might Have Done Worse.

"The Gilder girls didn't do so badly,
after all."

How was that?

"Why, Jane's duke turned out to be a cook, and Ann's count was a waiter.
But they both wanted work, and Mrs.
Gilder told me only the other day that she couldn't ask for better help."— Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Her Specification.

He—So you think married life ought to be one grand, sweet song?

She—Yes.

He—What air would you prefer for this matrimonial song?

She—I think a millionaire.—Baltimore American.

Playing Safe.

Tom—I say, old man, are you superstitious about dining with thirteen at the table?

Jack—Well, that depends.

Tom—Depends upon what?

Jack—Whether the supply will equal the demand.—Chicago News.

An Aid to Composition.

"Do you find that dictating to a stenographer is an economy of time?"

"Yes," answered the eminent author.

"It saves you the trouble of looking in the dictionary to see how long words are spelled."—Washington Star.

Historical Note.

Fresh—Who is the smallest man
mentioned in history?

Soph—I give up.

Fresh—Why, the Roman soldier who slept on his watch.—Pennsylvania Punch Bowl.

Easily Explained.

Miss Chatters—It surprises me to see what a small man your brother is.

He's no more than half your size.

Mr. Patters—Yes, but he's only my half brother, you know.—Judge.

In the Ecstatic Stage.

The Girl (passing her fair hand over his brow)—There, Arthur! Have I charmed your headache away?

Arthur—You have, dear. You're my witch Hazel.—Chicago Tribune.

Same Old Deduction.

"There is no doubt that women always get what they want."

"And of course that explains why
they don't get the ballot."—Cleveland
Plain Dealer.

TO WIN HOME TRADE

Compete With Mail Order Houses
by Advertising.

ADOPT BUSINESS METHODS.

Let the People Know Prices of Your Goods—Make Advertisements Personal, Simple, Honest, Definite and Direct—Use Plenty of Printer's Ink.

In this the age of printer's ink there is just one way for home merchants to compete with mail order houses, and that is to advertise. It does no good simply to abuse the mail order houses and avails little to appeal merely to local sentiment. The mail order houses must be met both in prices and publicity. In this competition the home merchant has the natural advantages of time, of freight rates and of the local newspaper. He can deliver goods at once, whereas the order house requires weeks. He can deliver direct without transportation charges. In his home paper he has an avenue for advertising which the order house lacks. With such factors in his favor
it is his own fault if he does not win.

People trade with mail order houses
because they think they get goods cheaper. Investigation shows that on the whole this is a mistake. Considering the quality of goods sold, local merchants can and in most cases do sell just as cheaply as the order houses. What they need is to acquaint the public with this fact. They can do so through advertising.

Advertising, however, is a science.
It must be done persistently and intelligently if it is to bring results. Advertising copy should be changed every insertion. It should be made simple, honest, definite, direct. It should be personal, the merchant talking to his patron. It should be striking enough to attract attention and with sufficient interest and information to hold the attention attracted. It should not only bring customers to the store,
but should bring them looking for some definite article or line of articles.
Shopping now is mostly done by women, and the woman shopper eagerly scans the advertising columns.

Customers of mail order houses
have learned that many of the goods sold are not durable. This is the disadvantage of buying without inspection. Here is another item favoring the home merchant, but in order that it may be telling the home merchant must use it. He must fight the order house with its own weapons—fight publicity with publicity, price with price. The order house makes its campaign by the use of printer's ink.
The home merchant must make his
campaign by the use of printer's ink.
The order house tells in detail what it has to sell without the use of surplus words, but covering all points
that the customer wishes to know.
The home merchant must adopt the same tactics. The order house is scrupulously honest in returning every cent if more than the right amount is sent, or if prices have fallen, or if some article ordered is out of stock. The home merchant must show the same scrupulous honesty. The order house is most careful to give even the smallest customer to understand that his wants are being promptly looked after.
The merchant must have the same prompt, businesslike way. Indifference never pays. There is nothing so wins business as business methods.
Cash follows confidence. Success comes from knowing and doing. Advertising always pays if the advertiser knows how and keeps at it.

The advertiser must put himself in the reader's place. Let him think what would catch his eye, what would hold him, what would awaken in him a desire to buy and finally what would clinch the matter and take him to the store. There are some ads. one simply cannot help reading. There are some ads. that convince one of their honesty and sincerity. They do not arouse incredulity by overstatement.
They are not like every other ad., but have an individuality of their own.
They cover only one article or one line
and so do not confuse the reader.
They are fresh, not being the same thing that has stood in the paper month after month. The ad. is the merchant's salesman on the road. It works while he sleeps. It brings in customers while he waits on others.
It carries abroad his fame. It creates a market, builds a desire for goods, educates the public up to a want. It helps the town, for it brings trade from a distance. I am now talking of real advertisement, not the dead-alive thing that sometimes passes under that name. A good ad. is of the sort that hustles for business just as a commercial traveler does. It will not be denied or overlooked. It compels attention, respect and patronage. One of the most important elements in the education of a business man of today
is to know how to write advertising.
For such a man the money he puts into printer's ink is an investment. He counts on it as much as he does on cost price or rent or labor.

This is the way to meet the mail order houses. The local merchant has practically all of the natural advantages on his side. Local sentiment, acquaintance, neighborly feeling, reciprocity in business, quickness of delivery, opportunity to inspect goods, absence of transportation charges, cheaper ground rents and cheaper labor and the avenue of the local newspaper, all these factors are his helpers. With these weapons he can win. But he must plan his campaign and fight with energy and intelligence. And, above all, he must use printer's ink.
JAMES A. EDGERTON.

A Fashion Chat on the Styles of the Day.

Directoire modes with their long, clinging lines have made necessary distinctive styles in underwear. When first these modes made their appearance much interest was aroused because of the lack of the usual number of petticoats which fashion insisted must go. As there are, however, very many women who will not give up these garments and as sienderness of line must be adhered to strictly, combination garments have been resorted to as a means of eliminating fulness. Not that this type of garment is altogether new, but that it is exploited in new forms which tend to create the desired new figure.

The very slender woman who finds it unnecessary to resort to devices to decrease her size may continue to wear the dainty, ruffled fancies in which she delights, but her stouter sister welcomes with joy the advent of the close fitting corset cover and knickers which are now receiving general approbation.

Pictorial Review Pattern No. 2981 illustrates a late model of the type last mentioned. The corset cover is very plain and close fitting even the fulness usually observed at the waistline having been eliminated by a dart taken up from waistline to bust. The "knickers" are fitted to the waist and hips by darts and the fulness of the leg may be confined by a band of ribbon run beading or by an elastic run through the hem as the taste of individual may elect. The corset cover and "knickers" are joined together by a narrow belt which is overlaid with beading, but if preferred they may be used separately.
Nainsook, cross-barred dimity and similar materials are very dainty, but silk, satin and sateen are among the materials frequently used. Many of the silk "knickers" displayed in the shops have linings of lawn or soft china silk, of course detachable, especially if they are of black or colored fabrics.
The pattern sizes are 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure.

Pictorial Review Pattern No. 2946 is a combination pattern of very different type in that it combines three garments in its construction: a corsetcover, drawers and short petticoat. The corset cover shows a slight fulness in the front, but has a plain back. The drawers are slightly circular in shape and to them is attached the petticoat section. The lower small view suggests the method of attaching the petticoat which is finished with a ruffle matching the drawers and appears to be a part of the drawers so cleverly is the joining made. It is attached to the drawers at the belt and down the side of the drawer leg, for the petticoat section is really only half a petticoat, the drawers forming the front part. All portions are attached together beneath a narrow belt and the result is a charmingly dainty and practical garment. The pattern sizes are 32, 36, 40 and 44 inches bust measure. Price either pattern, including cutting and construction guides, 15 cents.

SIMPLE ROAD DRAG.

How to Make and Use One Composed of Railroad Iron.

Two pieces of railroad iron five feet
long are required to make the road drag shown in the accompanying illustration. Drill holes in each end of

ROAD DRAG OF RAILROAD IRON.

these irons and bolt them with iron rods two and a half feet apart on one end and two feet on the other.

Hitch a horse to each end of this drag and drive the narrow end toward the ditch every time. This brings the dirt to the center of the road. By spiking a plank through the center one can ride on the drag. Drag the roads after rains as soon as the mud dries.

Importance of Good Roads.

Delaware county, Pa., is furnishing an illustration of the part smooth highways is going to play in general freight traffic in the near future. Thousands of dollars' worth of goods that until recent years were hauled by the railroads are now delivered direct from the stores or from the farms to the cities. Motor wagons are penetrating the farming districts and taking freights from the farmer's door to the city market and bringing back purchases by the same method. In short,
good roads will be the leading factor
in determining the mooted question of freight rates.

Frank Brown Gets New Trial.

Marion, Ind., April 28.—Frank Brown, who was found guilty of the murder of Rosa Ricks, in the Grant circuit court March 27 and sentenced to life imprisonment, has been granted a new trial by Judge H. J. Paulus.
The new hearing is granted chiefly for the reason that the evidence, which was wholly circumstantial, was not satisfactory to the court.

Know the Business.

"Children, children! Don't make such a frightful noise," said the distracted mother.

"We're playing omnibus, mamma,"
said Mattie soberly.

"Yes, I know, dear, but it isn't really necessary to make such a terrible noise."

"Yes, it is, mamma. We've got to where Mattie insists on paying the fare and so do I."—London Fun.

THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1909

STARK and Kosciusko counties hold local option elections today and Martin, Jefferson, Washington and Tippecanoe vote tomorrow.

A MOVEMENT has started at Boston for a world's exposition there in 1920 to commemorate the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims and the founding of New England. Announcement is made early that the world may know that the year 1920 is reserved by the United States for a great exposition to celebrate an important historic event. New England has never had a great exposition but proposes to have one in 1920. This movement will at once appeal to the patriotic people throughout the country.

JUMPED IN A POND

Bedford Girl Saves Her Life by Her Presence of Mind.

Bedford, Ind., April 29.—The presence of mind of the fifteen-year-old daughter of Andy Lentz, when she discovered her clothing one fire is all that saved her life. As it is she is badly burned, but hope is entertained of her recovery.

Miss Lentz had been ironing and stepped out into the yard, when she discovered her dress was on fire. Failing to smother the fire with her hands, she hurried to a pond about fifty yards away and plunged in. The fire was extinguished, but not until her dress had been almost burned off.

Mrs. Hettie McCann, who has been very low for the past two weeks at the home of her son, Ben McCann, on S. O'Brien street, continues to improve slowly.

Mrs. Ben Simon and children returned home this afternoon from spending some time in Cincinnati.

Mrs. Smith's Hired Girl.

Mrs. Smith is lucky. She has kept a servant for three years, and although the girl has been offered more money elsewhere she won't leave Mrs. Smith. The girl does all the washing, scrubs the floors, does up the lace curtains, and even washes the bedding. People wonder why she stays at Mrs. Smith's and does so much more work than other girls can be induced to do, until they learn that Mrs. Smith buys Easy Task laundry soap, which does one-half the work and makes the other half easier.

A new way to clean Lace Curtains

The old way of ironing the family lace curtains or to pin them on the carpet is a terrible task to the housewife. It means sore thumbs, backache, and the house all upset. Now a new way has been found that lets you have fresh, clean curtains all the time.

You will know how easy it is when you

Use the "No-Piece" Stretcher

NOT COMPETENT WITNESS

The Governor Writes to Judge Funk About the Subpoenae.

Indianapolis, April 29.—Governor Marshall and his private secretary, Mark Thistlethwaite, have been served with subpoenae to appear before the grand jury at South Bend, next Tuesday, to tell what they know about prize fighting in that city. Governor Marshall sent a letter to Judge W. A. Funk, of South Bend, telling him he has no personal knowledge of prize fighting there, but that reports have reached him that fights have been pulled off there. He asked Judge Funk to apprise Prosecutor Pattee of the contents of the letter. If the prosecutor thinks the governor and his secretary can throw any light on the situation, the governor says they will go to South Bend. The bouts that were advertised for South Bend this week were stopped by Mayor Fogarty. Prosecutor Pattee's efforts to drag the governor and his secretary to South Bend to testify are not regarded seriously here. The governor merely called Pattee's attention to reports that fights were being permitted. His information came through newspapers and he merely asked Pattee to investigate. Promoters of the fist game fear that Pattee's move may cause the governor to issue an order at once against the game that will stop it in every city in the state where boxing bouts of ten rounds are now permitted.

A shake-up may come in the Indiana railroad commission within the next few days that will startle the natives. Governor Marshall has a plan of reorganization in mind that will completely change things. He may delay taking action until Monday although he hopes to be able to act at once. The term of Judge Wood, of Evansville, expires tomorrow. He has served for four years, having been appointed as a Democrat by Governor Hanly when the commission was created. While the governor has no particular desire to continue Hanly appointees in office, he may hold to Judge Wood. In fact, it can be stated on reliable authority that if the governor's plans for reorganizing the commission goes through, Judge Wood will be retained and appointed for a short term of two years. The governor believes that he has the authority to appoint a new commissioner. At present two members—Judge McClure and Henry Bowling are Republicans. Charles Reiley, secretary of the commission, is a Republican. His job pays $2,500 a year. He is a Hanly appointee. The rest of the clerical force are Republicans as are the inspectors.

DASTARDLY ASSAULT

Young Kentucky Girl' Selzed at Her Own Door.

Winchester, Ky., April 29.—Much excitement was caused here last night by the finding, bound and gagged, of Miss Josie Turner, aged about sixteen years. She was quickly unbound and told a distressing story of attempted assault. She says she had just stepped out on her back porch to clean some supper dishes when she was seized by two men, who slipped something over her head and face. They were very strong and all her efforts did little more than worry them.

She struggled so, however, that they gave up their attempted assault and carried her about 100 yards from her home and left her in the yard of the Equity Redrying plant, after having tied her hands and feet with a rope and bound her shirtwaist around her mouth. Her clothes were nearly all stripped from her and her body was covered with bruises. She had evidently suffered much. She was unconscious for two hours after her discovery. She was covered with blood, which was streaming from her nose and mouth. The whole city was seething with excitement and bloodhounds were brought from Lexington by automobile. Arrests are expected soon.

COLD-BLOODED MURDER

Is Is Thus That State Characterizes Killing of Annis.

Flushing, L. I., April 29.—With the jury box filled, little time was wasted with preliminaries when the trial of Capt. Peter C. Haines, for the murder of William E. Annis on the float of the Bayside Yacht Club, was resumed before Judge Garretson. Special Prosecutor George A. Gregg made the opening address for the state. He characterized the murder as unusually cold-blooded and bearing all the marks of premeditation. Many women were in the court room.

Eugene M. Young, of counsel for Capt. Peter C. Haines, in opening the case for the defense, told the jury that evidence would be presented to show that Capt. Hains had been insane as early as May 31, 1908, and was insane at the time he shot and killed Annis.

Poured Booze Into Street.

Gary, Ind., April 29.—Ten cases of beer and a quantity of whisky and wines belonging to Ignatz Pietzak were confiscated by the police in a blind tiger raid. The liquor was poured into the street and the cases were burned in front of the police station.

Aids Nature

The great success of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in curing weak stomachs, wasted bodies, weak lungs, and obstinate and lingering coughs, is based on the recognition of the fundamental truth that "Golden Medical Discovery" supplies Nature with body-building, tissue-repairing, muscle-making materials, in condensed and concentrated form. With this help Nature supplies the necessary strength to the stomach to digest food, build up the body and thereby throw off lingering obstinate coughs. The "Discovery" re-establishes the digestive and nutritive organs in sound health, purifies and enriches the blood, and nourishes the nerves—in short establishes sound vigorous health.

If your dealer offers something "just as good," it is probably better FOR HIM...it pays better. But you are thinking of the cure not the profit, so there's nothing "just as good" for you. Say so.

AFTER SUFFERING ONE YEAR

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Milwaukee, Wis. — "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me a well woman, and I would like to tell the whole world of it. I suffered from female trouble and fearful pains in my back. I had the best doctors and they all decided that I had a tumor in addition to my female trouble, and advised an operation. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman and I have no more backache. I hope I can help others by telling them what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me." — Mrs. Emma Imse, 833 First St., Milwaukee, Wis.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every such suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

PHONE FOR SEA FOGS

Wireless Device to Keep Ships From Colliding.

ITS VALUE SAID TO BE PROVED

Inventor Explains His Contrivance For Determining Exact Distance From Horn or Bell on Ocean—A Matter of Only a Few Seconds.

According to the officers of a wireless telegraph company in New York, a new invention, known as the "fog phone," will afford protection against collision between ships in a fog. The inventor is Robert H. Marriott of Brooklyn, one of the scientific directors of the company. Patents have been granted, and Mr. Marriott recently made practical tests, which, he says, proved the value of the contrivance. Preparations are being made for its installation in a score of the ocean going vessels.

The "fog phone" is an amplification of the present systems of wireless telephony and the submarine bell, making use of all three of these methods of communication. Mr. Marriott described his device as follows:

"The basic principle of the fog phone is the fact that sound travels through the air at a rate of approximately a thousand feet a second or through water at a slightly greater rate of speed and that when sound is reproduced at a distance by means of wireless waves its velocity is practically that of light, or 186,000 miles a second.

"This is how I have applied these two well known scientific laws: A bell ringing in the air, if the sound waves are gathered by the transmitter of a wireless telephone, may be heard distinctly in a wireless receiver one mile distant in one one-hundred-and-eighty-six thousandths of a second, or instantaneously so far as the human senses can determine. The same sound traveling through the air will reach the same receiving point just five seconds later.

"These two sounds are identical in tone, and it is this fact which will prevent any mistake on the part of the operator in picking out a particular bell. The instant the sound of the bell is heard through the wireless receiver the operator presses a button which starts a device similar to a stop watch, except that the points around the circumference of the dial instead of representing seconds indicate distances in miles and feet.

"The instant the sound of the bell reaches the operator through the air or through the mechanism of the submarine bell he presses the button once more. This stops the clocklike device, and the hand of the dial indicates accurately the distance between the point where the sound originates and the point of its reception. For example, should the sound of a bell on board a vessel in a fog be heard by means of the wireless telephone and arrive seven and a half seconds ahead of the same sound going in the natural way through the air or transmitted through the water by means of the submarine bell device it is a simple matter to calculate that the vessel is 7,500 feet distant, or not quite a mile and a half away. The indicator of the fog phone, however, gives the exact distance in feet.

"When the sound of the bell is next heard the operation is repeated, and the dial of the indicator shows whether the point from which the sound emanates is nearer or farther away than before. This knowledge enables the man in the pilothouse to avoid all danger of collision. A bell ringing from a station on a rock or other menace to navigation will accurately indicate the location of such danger and make it an easy matter for the pilot of a vessel to steer clear of it.

"In some cases it is desirable to use a submarine bell instead of the ordinary fog bell. This is made possible by the fact that all vessels are now or soon will be equipped with the submarine bell apparatus, and the wireless telegraph system is now almost universally used by all seagoing ships.

"At the receiving station the operator has a pair of telephone receivers held to each ear in the usual way. One of these is attached to the wireless receiver, while the other connects with the transmitter which picks up the sound coming through the air or water.

"When it is desirable to reach out a great distance for the sound of the warning bell both receivers at the operator's ears are connected with the wireless telephone receiver. When he hears the sound of the bell he presses the button, and this not only starts the measuring device going, but switches the telephone receivers from the wireless receiver to the telephone transmitter used to pick up the sounds from the air or water. When the signal is heard by way of the water or air the pressing of the button registers the distance separating the point of reception from the other vessel or danger point and at the same time switches the head telephone back to the wireless circuit.

"It is a fact often stated by the officers of ships that it is next to impossible to calculate the distance or direction of a vessel in a fog by the sound of her bells or whistle coming through the air. A naval officer told me of a point in Puget sound where such a signal could be heard more than a hundred yards in one direction, while in other directions it might be heard two miles or more. The fog phone sets such conditions as these at defiance."—New York Post.

GOOD ROAD POINTERS

Suggestions to Supervisors on the Care of Highways.

SIMPLE BUT USEFUL DON'T'S.

Expert Tells How to Keep a Road in Good Condition and Avoid Trouble. Don't Be Satisfied, He Says, With Anything but the Best.

Excellent advice on the care and construction of roads is contained in the following set of suggestions to road supervisors, which were compiled by Robert A. Meeker, state supervisor of roads in New Jersey:

Don't leave grass and weeds on the shoulders and in the gutters.

Don't dig the mud out of the gutters and throw it upon the road.

Don't leave dirt in piles on the road.

Don't throw grass and weeds upon the road surface.

Don't dump stone or gravel on an old road without first preparing the surface to receive it, because you thereby cause willful waste and woeful want.

Don't place new material on the road without leveling and shaping it so that the grade and cross section of the road will be unchanged.

Don't expect travel to spread and roll the new material. One-half of the money spent is wasted by this method.

Don't put new material on an old hard road surface before first picking or loosening the old covering. It is good for the quarryman and gravel owner, but bad for the taxpayer and road user.

Don't try to do work without proper tools.

Don't leave your scarifier in the shed.

Don't forget to use your sprinkling wagon.

Don't let your steam roller be idle.

Don't think any old tools are good enough for road work.

Don't use dull picks, broken shovels, dull scraper blades or broken and leaky steam rollers.

Don't waste your rainy days.

Don't let water stand on your road.

Don't try to repair a road in dry weather without a liberal use of water.

A ROAD LEFT TO TAKE CARE OF ITSELF.

Don't allow culverts or pipes to become choked up.

Don't allow the outlets of under-drains to become stopped up.

Don't let water get under a road.

Don't let ruts form.

Don't let the road lose its original cross section.

Don't let the shoulders get higher than the center of the road.

Don't fall to widen your fills at every opportunity. No better place for the mud, grass and weeds taken off the road than on the sides of high embankments.

Don't use guard rails if you can get dirt to widen your road.

Don't bury a stone road under mud.

Don't crown your road so high that no one will travel on the sides.

Don't forget that the entire width of the road is intended for use.

Don't expect a road to take care of itself.

Don't fail to locate all good repair material lying on or near the road.

Don't wait until you are ready to go to work before you procure the necessary materials for repair.

Don't be constantly changing your road gang.

Don't let experienced men go simply to give some one a job.

Don't lose sight of the fact that road repairing is a trade and must be learned.

Don't guess at the amount of material required. Measure and know.

Don't depend on some one else to tell you what the condition of your roads is.

Don't fail to visit every road under your care at least once a week.

Don't refuse to try any new material that may be offered unless the same has been proved bad.

Don't think there is nothing more to be learned about road building.

Don't forget that nobody knows it all.

Don't think because you do not hear the comments that your work is not being praised or criticised, as the case may be.

Don't look down on your work.

Don't lose sight of the fact that good roads are one of the greatest factors in the development of any country.

Don't forget that churches and schools cannot thrive without good roads.

Don't be satisfied with anything but the best.

Pennsylvania's New Roads.

According to the report of the state highway commissioner of Pennsylvania, 325 miles of new roads were built during the past year at a cost of $3,000,000 or more.

RESULT OF SUFFRAGE

Colorado Woman Tells How It Aids Cupid.

SAYS MARRIAGES INCREASE.

Men More Attentive and Women More Feminine With Right to Vote, Declares Dr. Mina McEachern—Suffrage's Aid to Laws.

Not less but more than formerly is the measure of a man's love for a woman after she has striven for and captured the right to vote.

Not less feminine, but better graced in the gentler arts of femininity, is the woman after she has acquired the ballot.

Such is the result of suffrage where it is practiced, on the word of one from the heart of woman's political stronghold. Dr. Mina McEachern spoke before the Political Equality league in Chicago the other afternoon.

"Women in Colorado wear a different expression in their faces from the unaltered look of earlier years," she said further. "They have a fuller, broader, more comprehending look, than before they began to take an active part in the management of the state's affairs."

She also asserted that women in the higher walks of life who formerly pursued independent careers had married in greater numbers since the dawn of the new era in state politics.

"Suffrage," she said, "has forever proved the contrary of the old belief that men do not care for sensible girls. But, if the movement has resulted in good for the women, how much more good has it done the men! You don't know how much good it does a man to treat a woman right."

One of the good results to women, as she sees it, is that more books on political economy have been sold in Colorado since suffrage was adopted. She argues that the women have bought them and that they have been reclaimed from the reading of light fiction.

She declares "that tired look and feeling" which mark women in other states are not due to actual exhaustion, but to being unoccupied and bored.

"What the women need is not rest," she asserted, "but mental occupation." Legal benefits also would accrue, in the opinion of the speaker, if suffrage became a fact.

"Women have not enough financial sense," she said, "to listen to the financial arguments in favor of the child labor law, and they would fight for it against all persuasion to the contrary." They also would minimize what Dr. McEachern considers the demoralizing habit of treating. It has been greatly restricted in Denver. They also would see that the board of health had enough money and would cut the salaries of the aldermen before they would let this other body suffer.

Last and perhaps best, in the opinion of the speaker, suffrage would cure hysteria, the mania for clothes and for looking pretty, said by the speaker to possess womankind. Far from interfering with good housekeeping, she believes suffrage would promote it.

GONDOLA SHOE.

Freaky Sample of Footgear That Has an Invisible Fastening.

Fashion adopts strange freaks in the search for novelties. One of the newest ventures into the realm of the bizarre is the gondola shoe. It is about the freakiest footgear the United States has seen. That it ever will become popular in America is out of the question. American women go to great lengths now and then, but it's certain they won't give up their heels, and that's what the wearer of the gondola shoe must do, for the sole of the shoe is flat as the proverbial pancake, flatter than a flatiron, flatter than flattery from an unwelcome flatterer. A woman who has seen the novelty says:

"I do not think many women, even in Paris, will wear the new shoe long. It is unlike anything that we have had of late. Women will not forego the fascination of the heel. It is an old fashioned shoe, but is embroidered heavily with many colors. The shoe is for afternoon wear and matches the gown and the rest of the toilet. It may be made of satin, silk, suede or any material similar to the dress. The toe is very, very long and pointed, and the shoe must fit like a glove. The fastening is invisible. It leaves one guessing where it is, being hidden by the mass of colored embroideries. Only the owner of a very pretty foot ought to venture forth in the gondola shoe, as it makes an ordinary foot look enormous."

Book of Discipline For Roosevelt.

One of the parting gifts to former President Roosevelt was a handsomely bound copy of the "Discipline of the Methodist Episcopal Church," a present from the general conference of the northern wing, done on vellum paper in soft, hand tooled leather and inclosed in a case of morocco and velvet. This is a special compliment, as Mr. Roosevelt is not a Methodist, but a member of the Dutch Reformed church.

Rink in a Church Basement.

The Rev. Hiram B. Harrison, pastor of the First Congregational church of Hastings, Neb., created a flurry the other day when he announced in his sermon that it was his intention to have a roller skating rink established in the basement of a proposed new church building. The projected structure's total cost will be $20,000.

IMPUTATION IS “MOST UNJUST”

What Van Vlissingen Says In Walsh and Blount Defense.

THEIR NAMES WERE DRAWN IN

Attorney For Rosenberg and Rosenfeld Whom Convict Van Vlissingen Has Accused of Early Knowledge of His Huge Forgeries Brought Into the Bankruptcy Hearing the Names of John R. Walsh and Fred M. Blount, to Van Vlissingen's Manifest Distress.

Chicago, April 29.—The names of John R. Walsh, former president of the Chicago National Bank, who is under a five-year sentence for misapplying the funds of that institution, and Fred M. Blount, Mr. Walsh's business and political associate, have been drawn into the Peter Van Vlissingen forgery scandal here.

Mr. Van Vlissingen, who was brought up from Joliet prison to explain his assets before Referee in Bankruptcy Frank L. Wean, and who had testified that Bernhard Rosenberg and Maurice Rosenfeld, Chicago capitalists, had knowledge of his practices as early as 1904 and had compelled him to carry out more forgeries in order to pay them, was asked this question by Attorney Lessing Rosenthal, representing the two accused financiers:

“What information did you get before or subsequent to November 6, 1908 (the day Van Vlissingen confessed to his crimes to the state's attorney) that John R. Walsh and Fred M. Blount knew of your illegal practices?”

“I had no knowledge prior to that date,” responded Van Vlissingen. The question plainly excited the witness.

“Well, subsequent?” persisted Mr. Rosenthal.

“If you would permit me to talk with you I think you would withdraw that question,” faltered the witness.

“I have nothing to conceal, but a conference can do no harm,” said Mr. Rosenthal.

A conference was then held, after which Mr. Rosenthal asked:

“Were any facts disclosed to you prior to your exposure to show you that either John R. Walsh or Fred M. Blount knew your secret?”

“No,” replied Van Vlissingen.

“Did any one know it beside Rosenfeld and Rosenberg?”

“Not to my knowledge.”

At the close of the session, Van Vlissingen in the presence of his counsel made this statement:

“It is most unjust that Mr. Walsh's name should be dragged into this trial for some purpose not evidenced. Lessing Rosenthal, as attorney for Rosenberg and Rosenfeld, came to the penitentiary January 25 and informed me that Walsh knew my secret.”

Mr. Rosenthal said: “I never informed Van Vlissingen that Walsh knew his secret and the former knows this well enough. The name of Walsh was not mentioned during our conversation at the penitentiary.”

OLD SULTAN IS ABOVE THE LAW

Turks Will Not Place Abdul Hamid on Trial.

TO BE KEPT A CLOSE PRISONER

Deciding to Take No Chances On a Possible Coup d'Etat On the Part of Their Deposed Ruler, the Turks Have Placed the Old Sultan in a Salonikan Stronghold and Will See to it That His Sympathizers do Not Have Access to Him.

Saloniki, April 29.—Abdul Hamid arrived here from Constantinople this morning. He was accompanied by two of his sons and a suite of seventeen persons, including eleven women of his harem. The party was escorted to the villa in the suburbs which has been set aside for the use of the deposed sultan.

Constantinople, April 29.—The former ruler of the empire, Abdul Hamid II, is to be kept a prisoner in a large house with walled grounds on a height overlooking Saloniki, which has lately been occupied by the Italian commander of the international gendarmerie. He is not to be put on trial, as has been widely reported in Constantinople, for he is considered to be above the law.

It was thought wise to keep the deposed sultan in European Turkey, remote from the capital. His household will be administered for him upon a generous scale and his life will be safeguarded as he earnestly besought when notified of his dethronement.

Abdul Hamid, with four wives, five daughters and two of his younger sons, two eunuchs and a comparatively large number of female servants, was taken from the Yildiz palace and started under an escort to Saloniki. The party proceeded by steam launches to the landing near the railway, and a special train, on which they were placed, left at once.

The Constitutionalists would like to get back part of the great sums of money that the former sultan is supposed to have abroad, not only because the government is in need of the money, but because it is desirable that he should be deprived of the resources for another coup d'etat.

It was mentioned with pleasure at the palace of Mehemmed V. that the American ambassador was the first of the foreign representatives to communicate his good wishes to the newly proclaimed sultan. The sultan sent his compliments and thanks to Mr. Leishman, expressing pleasure that the representative of the United States was the first to congratulate him.

The city is gaily decorated and general rejoicing continues. Although yesterday was a holiday, courtmartial were held and several of the principals in the mutiny of the troops were condemned to death. Later they were taken outside the walls of the city and shot. Prince Sabah Eddine, the nephew of the sultan, who was arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the rising, has been liberated and his release has caused a good impression.

OPERATORS DID NOT RECOGNIZE UNION

Differences In Hard Coal Field
Finally Adjusted.

Scranton, Pa., April 29.—After weeks of consideration and much conferring the final stage in the work of settling the differences existing between the anthracite mine workers and their employers has been reached and today is expected to see the end of the controversy. The agreement is identical with the one signed three years ago in New York, with certain additional conditions which the operators have conceded the men. The United Mine Workers' union under the agreement is not officially recognized the miners having waived this demand. The agreement will be signed by the members of the miners' committee of seven without any official reference to the organization.

Myers was thrown out and was so badly injured he died. He was sixty years old, and recently was appointed justice of the peace of Hanover township.

HOLLAND ANXIOUSLY AWAITING AN HEIR

Little Mary—"F-E-L-S-N-A-P-T-H-A. What does that spell, Anty?"

Anty Drudge—"To you, Dearie, it spells just Fels-Naptha, the name of a soap. To your mother and me it spells an easy way of washing clothes in cool or lukewarm water, without boiling or hard rubbing and with a saving of time, labor, bother, discomfort and money. You'll learn, some day, my child, that it's a very important word to the housekeeper."

The biggest woman's club in America is the Anti-Drudgery Club.

It has more than a million members now.

All that's necessary to belong is to use Fels-Naptha soap and quit drudging on washday.

You'll have no more boiling of clothes, no bending over steamy suds, no back-breaking rubbing on a washboard in winter or summer.

You will be through with your washing before you would be well started on the old way.

And your clothes will be fresher, cleaner, whiter and sweeter.

Fels-Naptha does it.

The rules of the club are to be found in the directions for using Fels-Naptha on the back of the red and green wrapper.

Follow them carefully and you'll save money as well as hard work and bother.

Get a cake of Fels-Naptha and join the club to-day.

TALKS ON ADVERTISING

XI.—The Ad. as a Salesman

By Henry Herbert Huff

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

"Mr. Business Man, before we go into the subject of advertisement construction I want to make sure that you understand its underlying principles.

"Half a century ago retail advertising was quite unknown. If you wanted to buy something you went to the local store and examined the articles in stock, using your senses to make the test, and the dealer, in his efforts to make a sale, employed personal magnetism and skill in showing up selling points.

"Such methods are too slow for this age of the world, and the ambitious merchant wants to reach for trade into neighborhoods where people are not in the habit of coming to his store.

"So the advertisement came into being as a substitute for the human salesman. It so familiarizes the public with the merits of products that they are bought without further examination. Advertised brands go more readily because the public is familiar with them. So with the store—buyers may be 'educated' to associate the advertiser's name with his lines of goods and to know before entering the store the good points and price of an article on sale.

"The ideal ad. will of necessity embody in the largest degree the positive qualities of the human salesman. In making the change from 'individual' to 'collective' salesmanship the seller loses to a considerable extent his ability to say just the right thing for each different patron, and the buyer is forced to judge values from mere description and illustration. To overcome these difficulties the modern ad. is written in a personal way, as if the merchant were speaking directly to his reader. The customer gets out of his troubles by making his imagination do for all his senses.

"Therefore the description must be accurate and complete and the illustration truthful, so as to give him a true conception of the article. The various senses are appealed to through the use of euphonious and suggestive words.

"You probably have noticed the way in which the traveling salesman plots to get an order from you. His first move is to make your acquaintance and get attention. Then he begins to explain the proposition in an attractive manner and gets you interested. It isn't long before you desire something such as he has and begin asking questions about it, giving him an opportunity to convince you that it is the best to buy and that you should have it. Finally he names a price, and you have been led into it so systematically and artfully that you simply cannot resist buying. This is scientific salesmanship. These same elements go into the making of the scientific ad."
